The image displays four identical horizontal rows of Chinese characters. Each row contains two characters, '大' on the left and '扇' on the right. To the right of each character is a square stroke order diagram. The first three rows show the stroke order for the standard characters. The fourth row shows the stroke order for a variant form of '扇' where the top horizontal stroke is shorter.

The image displays a horizontal sequence of eight identical-sized squares arranged side-by-side. Each square contains a stylized Chinese character '收' (shōu) in a bold, black, brush-stroke font. The first four squares include dashed lines to guide the stroke order: the top-left stroke starts from the top left and curves down to the middle; the top-right stroke starts from the top right and curves down to the middle; the bottom-left stroke starts from the middle and extends downwards; and the bottom-right stroke starts from the middle and extends to the right. The subsequent four squares show the same characters but without the dashed lines, instead featuring small black dots at the starting points of each main stroke.

A horizontal row of nine square boxes for handwriting practice. The first four boxes show the stroke order for writing the character '灰': a vertical downward stroke, followed by a horizontal rightward stroke, another vertical downward stroke, and finally another horizontal rightward stroke. The next four boxes show the character '灰' written in a fluid, cursive style. The last two boxes are empty for additional practice.

The image displays a horizontal sequence of nine square frames, each containing a stylized Chinese character '美'. The characters are rendered in black ink on a white background, with dashed lines indicating stroke order and orientation. From left to right, the frames show the initial vertical stroke being drawn, followed by the horizontal stroke, and finally the completion of the character's structure.

The image shows four rows of Chinese characters. The first three rows each contain four identical characters '慕'. The fourth row contains five identical characters '慕'. Each character is shown in a square frame with a dashed horizontal and vertical center line. To the right of each character is its corresponding 5x5 dot matrix representation, which consists of a central asterisk (*) surrounded by a cross pattern of dots.
